

American Slavery: A Composite Autobiography

“The definitive Web resource for the study of American slavery. Highest praise goes to Greenwood Electronic Media for developing this important and affordable research milestone accessible to a wide spectrum of users.

American Slavery is strongly recommended for public, academic, and special libraries.”

—Library Journal

Give researchers the most comprehensive resource that preserves the stories of American slaves as told by ex-slaves themselves.

From 1936 to 1938, ex-slaves in the United States told, for the first time, stories of what it was like to be a slave in America and what life was like after freedom finally came. Told by the former slaves themselves, the narratives were collected under the auspices of the Work Projects Administration. Ultimately, nearly 4,000 narratives were collected.

Greenwood Electronic Media's online American Slavery: A Composite Autobiography is a definitive, authoritative resource for this important piece of American history—an essential collection made easily searchable via the Web, while maintaining historical authenticity.

Benefits

Researchers can:

- Explore an important part of American history, told through the voices of ex-slaves themselves.
- Conduct research: historical, genealogical, or sociological.
- Tap into an extensive index of links to related sources, categorized by type.
- Search by surname, location, age, alone, or combined with extensive subject index headings.
- Listen to archives of Folk Culture Sound Recordings added in 2003.

Search Features

American Slavery: A Composite Autobiography is easy to navigate.

---

Click on the search button and search the narratives by name of narrator, interviewer, or master.

---

Search by location—county and/or state in which the narrator lived in slavery or in which the narrator was interviewed.

---

Search by narrator's age or year of birth.

---

Search by location in the print collection.

American Slavery: A Composite Autobiography

Pricing

American Slavery offers affordable prices and unlimited access.

- Unit price from $900 to $2,950 one time purchase for digital content and 1 year Web access
  - Pricing based on the enrollment in the school, college or university, or the online population served by a public library or public library system
  - An annual web-access flat fee of $50 will be charged per institution
  - Discounts available when ordering multiple titles
  - Discounts for consortia members
  - Individual pricing is available for personal use only (requires prepayment)
-

For more information, an extended trial, or to order American Slavery, contact:

Greenwood Electronic Media

TEL: 1-800-225-5800 x3426

FAX: 203-454-8662

EMAIL: gemsales@greenwood.com

For a free trial, visit www.gem.greenwood.com

Greenwood Publishing Group
88 Post Road West, P.O. Box 5007
Westport, CT 06881-5007